À e à, - Tim Horriqan Plot SummaryPlot Synopsis Synopsis Controversial but Amaran Filmulous Malle perhaps he directed his most controversial film on Laurent and his complicated relationship with his mother. While he is located attracted to other women, he becomes bold, insulting and even unlikely. So, Laurent is unharmed by events that would irreparably shatter self-esteem of a modern American teenager: drunk, smokes, has sex, he is suffocated by his mother, he is ignored by his father, a priest makes a priest pass her, get rheumatoid fever, etc. We learn a lot about the mother of Laurent even in this film. Laurent is truly the most important character of the film, but mother of him is definitely the most important figure of his life. He didn't give way to the end of this movie. Bud Cort, in his debut performance, plays Massimo Monaldi, a student involved in political protests and child delinquency. He looks on Apple devices, streaming platforms and smart TV. The terms apply. There is enough scandalous behavior in this movie to create 100 Made-for-TV films, and yet this is a very happy and strangely innocent story. Perhaps Malle is trying to bring the reality of the sexuality of a young body. The film seems to last forever but in a beautiful way in motion. When fever leaves him with a murmur heart, Chevalier is placed in a sanatorium, together with his excessively attentive and adulterary mother. mother.
